Q: Scipy: Plotting a histogram with non-symmetric bins I'm trying to do a simple histogram on some data with Scipy. I have a histogram of an 'a' vector of floats and I'd like to fill the bins with 0, 1,... 8 values of b where b is a vector of 0, 1,... 8. I'm using the matplotlib.pyplot (using plt.hist) and have gotten it to work in the normal way. The range of my data extends through 0-1. However when I try to draw the histogram my bins are way too small. Below is a code snippet: fig = plt.figure() ax = fig.add_axes([0.02,0.05,0.7,0.9]) ax.hist(a, bins=8) plt.show() I know that I can shift the ranges using plt.rcParams['axes.ticks'] = kwargs['ticks'] but that doesn't seem to be working with a built in hist function. Is there a better way to do this? A: Finally I ended up using matplotlib.pyplot and got it to work. Figured I'd answer myself in case others find this as well. I ran into a few problems with the settings in the pyplot interpreter. First, I had to change the tick positions to 0, 0.5,... n. Second, to get the maximum of the data I had to make one of the axes auto-revert to the 'y' axis after the plot is made. Third, the max values had to be pulled from the 'bins' setting. See the code below: fig = plt.figure() ax = fig.add_axes([0.02,0.05,0.7,0.9],xlim=(0,1)) ax.hist(a, bins=8, normed=True) plt.ylim([-1,1]) ax.autorangex() ax.set_ylim([min(a),max(a)]) plt.draw() plt.show() --- id: 587d7f5a3674
